

Terms of Service

Last updated: July 10, 2026

These are the terms that apply when you work with Budapest Labs. We've kept them straightforward. No surprises.

What we do

We design and build websites for individuals and businesses of all sizes, from portfolios and brand pages to webshops and booking platforms. Depending on your plan, this can include: custom design and development, mobile-friendly layouts, hosting and deployment, domain and email setup, multilingual support, booking systems, online payments, analytics, and more. If you need something extra, we'll discuss it and agree on it together. The exact scope of your project is based on the plan you choose and anything else we agree on in writing.

How payment works

The information shown on our website is for guidance only. Your exact build fee, monthly fee, and expected delivery date are fixed in an individual contract before work begins, and the contract terms apply. The build fee is due once your website is finished and you have approved it. The monthly fee is the cost of development and covers operation for the contracted period; it starts on the day your site goes live, billed each month. You can also pay for 12 months upfront at go-live with a 12% discount; details are fixed in your contract. Domain registration and any paid extras are discussed and written into your contract. The service agreement runs for at least 12 months; after that it can be cancelled anytime with 30 days' notice. We accept bank transfer, Revolut, and cash. You will receive a proper invoice for every payment, issued in accordance with Hungarian law.

Revisions

Every plan comes with one round of revisions at no extra charge. This covers adjustments to the design, layout, or text. It doesn't cover starting from scratch or adding features outside the original plan. If you'd like additional changes beyond that, we'll let you know the cost upfront. No surprises.

Delivery timelines

The timelines on our website (1-2 days, 3-5 days, 1-2 weeks) are estimates based on typical projects. How long your project takes depends on its complexity and how quickly you can send us your content. We always do our best to deliver on time, but we can't guarantee exact dates. The clock starts once we have everything we need from you (text, images, logo). If there's a delay on your side, that doesn't count against our timeline.

What we need from you

To build your website, we'll need your content: text, images, logo, and any branding materials. We also ask that you review the preview within about a week. If we don't hear back within 14 business days, we'll consider the project approved. Please also make sure the content you send us is yours to use: we trust that you have the rights to everything you provide.

Who owns what

The website is yours. If you cancel after the minimum term, we hand over everything we built for you: design, content, and code. We may use general-purpose tools and code that aren't specific to your project. We'd also love to feature your site in our portfolio, but if you'd rather we didn't, just let us know.

Third-party services

Your website may use third-party services (hosting, domain, email). We'll help set everything up, but these are independent services with their own terms.

Cancellation

You can walk away at any point before you approve the finished website, and you pay nothing. After the 12-month minimum term you can cancel with 30 days' notice; we hand over the complete website and help you move it wherever you like. On our side, if we don't receive your content within 30 days or can't reach you for over 30 days, we may need to close the project.

Lifetime warranty

We stand behind our work for life. If something we built stops working as intended, we'll fix it at no cost, no matter how much time has passed. This covers bugs and defects in the code we delivered.

What's not covered: new features, design changes, content updates, or issues caused by modifications made by you or a third party. Third-party services (hosting providers, domain registrars, APIs) are outside our control.

If the underlying technology requires a significant update to keep your site functional, we'll let you know and offer a fair quote. That is separate from the warranty.

Our responsibility

Our liability is limited to the amount you paid for the project. We're not responsible for issues caused by changes you make after delivery, or for third-party service outages.

Legal details

These terms follow Hungarian law. If there's ever a disagreement, we'd prefer to work it out together first. Consumer complaints may also be directed to the competent conciliation body. If the dispute cannot be resolved otherwise, the Buda Central District Court or, depending on jurisdiction, the Budapest Capital Regional Court shall have exclusive jurisdiction.
